Reading Update September 2024

Dear Families,

As we start another school year, I wanted to begin what will become a monthly update for reading. These updates will inform you about the best children's literature either available or being released, any events linked to books happening either locally or nationally, as well as any North Lincolnshire library updates: all of this with the intention of making sure each and every child in our schools develops a love of reading, something we know is clear indicator of both future success and positive mental health.

Recommended Reads:

This month, I wanted to link you to the Waterstones September blog of up-and-coming books: https://www.waterstones.com/blog/the-waterstones-round-up-septembers-best-childrens-books-2024?utm_source=wsbooksblogrooney080924&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=single&utm_content=ChildrensCTA

I can't decide whether I'm more excited to read the new Hannah Gold book, Turtle Moon (I loved her first novel The Last Bear and am desperate to give this one a read) or the brand-new Alexander Armstrong book, Evenfall (I'm hoping this warms my heart as much as his TV presenting partner's book series for adults, The Thursday Murder Club!). There's also a new Julia Donaldson book, Jonty Gentoo: The Adventures of a Penguin - I think we've just found next year's Christmas TV special!

Events:

Coming up this month is the annual No Limits Festival based at Normanby Hall. This amazing event takes place the weekend of 21st and 22nd September and is completely free to attend. At the event, there will be a range of book related activities taking place including shows, performances, games, a pop-up book shop and a huge range of authors attending delivering workshops and signing books for children, including Christina Gabbitas, Jenny McLachlan, Peter Bunzl and Emma Carroll. I know I'll be attending!

North Lincolnshire Library Service:

Over the next month, our plan will be to ensure every child in our schools has a library card and has the chance to visit their nearest library. We will be inviting Jemima Kelly from the library service into our schools to deliver an information event for children and giving each child a library card application form. These will then be returned to school and turned into a library card. This will allow all our children access to the libraries across North Lincolnshire, but also allow them access to Borrowbox, the online app for borrowing both ebooks and audiobooks from the comfort of their own homes. As soon as we have more details about this, we'll send them out to you.

Otherwise, thank you for all the support you offer in terms of reading to schools; it makes such a difference. Please encourage your child to speak to staff in schools about what they are reading and books they've loved - it helps us to create an amazing book-filled community!

If I can be of any support in recommending books for your child, please don't hesitate to get in touch.

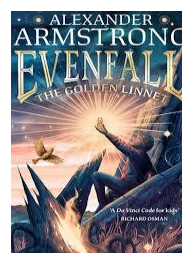

Many thanks,
Mrs Emma Nile,
English Subject Leader
